There has been several times in which I needed assistance from the Bursar, Registrar, and Financial Aid and received no response after MANY attempted phone calls and messages. 20	The Staff should show that they care about the university, not act like they are frustrated all the time. The staff should present themselves in a professional manner and they should know what is going on when you ask a question, not send you to fifty different people. The staff should support the students, not turn against them when it gets tough, because they do not want to fall with the students. The students should look like college students, not like they just left the club with everything they have hanging out for the world to see. The policy of no tobacco should ACTUALLY be enforced with students and faculty. Everyone needs to work together, and know that when a mistake is made, fix it, don't ignore it.	May 5, 2014 12:20 PM teacher, as well as how to work in a diverse population. The focus was solely on the achievement gap, and how poorly schools are doing to change that. My courses did not prepare me for lesson planning on my own, working with students in difficult situations, coping/managing a classroom, how to find information or activities for my lessons, etc.

55	My greatest take aways from KSU are social. I had an awful graduate experience. I had a disagreement with one professor and that one professor taught majority of the program - I sincerely feel that I was not assessed objectively and I feel that the professor in question was never held accountable or that my situation was thoroughly investigated. I did not feel supported by the same university that I previously earned two degrees from. Also financial aid, registrar, and bursar's office, are very unorganized, this school needs to update its data management, and be more courteous, the SOS staff should answer phone calls and help the students, instead of sending them to the next department that will send them right back.
