

Creative Writing Group

- Every Thursday the Writing Center will host Creative Writing Group from 11:30 – 12:30 PM.
- Creative Writing Group is a free event for the KSU community.
- The Writing Center will provide a new creative writing prompt for every Creative Writing Group session. This provides a fun and consistent challenge for writers to develop their creative writing skills.
 - Writers may use the whole prompt, part of the prompt, or write something completely different. There is no obligation to participate in the weekly prompt.
- Writers may use the time to...
 - write on their own.
 - brainstorm with staff and/or peers.
 - receive constructive feedback from staff and/or peers.
 - read aloud near the end of the session.
- Writing will never be graded or judged.
- Writers are NEVER required to share their work with anyone or read aloud.
 - However, writers may share their work near the end of the reserved time, if they would like. This will usually be within the last 10 minutes.
- Feedback given, even if critical, should be constructive.
- The Writing Center will always be kept relatively quiet and respectful during this time.

- The Writing Center encourages the exploration of ideas. We are open to writing in various genres, trying new writing strategies, experimenting with complex concepts, and engaging with difficult material.
- The Writing Center is an inclusive space that respects all religions, races, ethnicities, sexual orientations, genders, and disabilities. Any behavior, speech, readings, or writings utilizing or encouraging hate speech, discrimination, or harm that threatens the safety and/or inclusion of others will not be tolerated.
